

Series: Oversized - Rolled and Flat (Box 1)

Series one consists of maps and posters used By KFA for public education, to evaluate Forest Service land use and species protection proposals, to plan and inform Old Growth and other forest conservation strategies and to evaluate and propose salmon, Northern Spotted owl, other species and biodiversity protection. It includes a variety of Forest Service maps and poster-presented data and the Klamath Corridor Proposal maps, a KFA/Felice Pace proposal to link national forest wilderness areas in the Klamath Mountains (NW Ca. and SW Or.) with landscape linkages, including roadless areas. An earlier Regional Trail Plan map-based proposal developed by Felice and presented to the Forest Service is included. Also included are a few of the signs and posters used in Siskiyou County to oppose KFA's objectives.

This series includes Old Growth maps generated as part of National Audubon's Old Growth Mapping project, including the first map of national forest Old Growth within the range of the Northern Spotted owl which was taken to Washington DC and presented to congressional committee staff by Felice Pace and Brock Evans. It also includes remote sensing products produced by Reed Noss, Carlos Carrol and other scientists to identify old forest habitat and to inform science-based conservation proposals.

Series: Library - Bound Volumes (Boxes 2-7)

Included in series two are government documents and documents produced by the environmental community. Government documents include national forest land use planning documents, planning and project environmental analysis documents, national forest watershed assessments and other assessment document that are primarily for the Klamath National Forest but also include documents related to other Northern California national forests, the Upper Klamath River Basin National Wildlife Refuges, geothermal development in the Medicine Lake Highlands, mining proposals and documents related to fisheries (salmon) assessment and protection. Consultation documents for PacifiCorp's Klamath Hydroelectric Project relicensing are included as are various county and regional economic assessments and development plans, including a regional economic assessment of the Klamath River Basin commissioned by KFA and its allies and a study of the Siskiyou County Economy conducted by sociologist Kari Norgaard for KFA>

Also in this series is the regional water quality plan that implements the Clean Water Act a media analysis on attitudes toward forest protection, KFA materials in binders used for public education, and other miscellaneous bound documents.

Series: Paper Files (Boxes 8-86)

This series includes files on all the major issues KFA focused on but also includes files from Felice's pre-KFA work with Indigenous American tribes. Forest issue files deal mostly with national forest issues (logging, forest roads, forest fire, discretionary fire suppression, mining, land use, wildlife, fisheries) but also include Bureau of Land Management, private industrial logging and endangered species issues.

River, water and fisheries issues include files dealing with agricultural practices (especially stream diversions and groundwater pumping), dams, watershed analysis and rehabilitation, and water management. Included are watershed and fisheries restoration efforts on the Salmon River and the organization and work of the Scott River CRMP - a collaborative approach to dealing with agricultural impacts to salmon and steelhead, ESA salmon listings and related issues which operated during the period following ESA listing of Southern Oregon and Northern California (SONCC) Coho Salmon..

There are files on KFA's Outreach and Public Education efforts, including the handouts used in tabling at Siskiyou County Fair, environmental conferences and other events and workshops. Several files contain separate time-series press clips for Forest and Klamath River issues. These files document how local, regional and (occasionally) national print media reported on the "Forest Wars" of the late 80s through the early part of the present century.

Files dealing with local political issues in Siskiyou and Humboldt County include files dealing with alternative housing, folks living on mining claims, herbicides and harassment of Felice Pace, Petey Brucker and other KFA folks by activists trained in techniques developed by the Wise Use Movement to intimidate environmental activists.

KFA administrative files are in this series including grants received, grant reporting, mailing lists, tax filings and other administrative files.

Series: Photos/Slides (Boxes 87-93 - shoe box size)

This series includes photographs used in public education (posters and handouts, supplied to media folks, etc.) and to document forest and watershed conditions on the Klamath National Forest, other Northern California national forests, the Klamath Basin National Wildlife Refuges, and in Klamath River Basin rivers and streams, especially the Scott River, including agricultural practices and conditions like dewatering and pollution of streams by cattle and agricultural return flows.

The series should be useful to those who want to understand how KFA activists sought to influence/change public opinion and to those who want to get an idea of forest, watershed, water quality, stream conditions, agricultural, other land use and economic conditions in the Klamath Mountains and Klamath River Basin from the late 1980s through the early years of the 21st Century.

Included are images of clearcuts, road failures, natural fire areas and the impacts of fire suppression on vegetation and national forest watersheds. The collection also includes photos showing agricultural activities, including irrigation, the impact of agriculture on stream conditions and water quality, and economic conditions in Siskiyou County.
